Five ways to wellbeing

1. Connect...

With the people around you
With family, friends, colleagues and neighbours
At home, work, school or in your local community

Think of these as the cornerstones of your life and invest time in developing them

Building these connections will support and enrich you every day

This Devon Partnership NHS Trust initiative is part of the national Foresight campaign to promote mental health and personal wellbeing. Visit www.dpt.nhs.uk/FiveWays
Five ways to wellbeing

A review of the most up-to-date evidence suggests that building the following five actions into our day-to-day lives is important for wellbeing:

1. Connect...
With the people around you. With family, friends, colleagues and neighbours. At home, work, school or in your local community. Think of these as the cornerstones of your life and invest time in developing them. Building these connections will support and enrich you every day.

2. Keep Learning...
Try something new. Rediscover an old interest. Sign up for that course. Take on a different responsibility at work. Fix a bike. Learn to play an instrument or how to cook your favourite food. Set a challenge you will enjoy achieving. Learning new things will make you more confident as well as being fun.

3. Be Active...
Go for a walk or run. Step outside. Cycle. Play a game. Garden. Dance. Exercising makes you feel good. Most importantly, discover a physical activity you enjoy and that suits your level of mobility and fitness.

4. Take Notice...
Be curious. Catch sight of the beautiful. Remark on the unusual. Notice the changing seasons. Savour the moment, whether you are walking to work, eating lunch or talking to friends. Be aware of the world around you and what you are feeling. Reflecting on your experiences will help you appreciate what matters to you.

5. Give...
Do something nice for a friend, or a stranger. Thank someone. Smile. Volunteer your time. Join a community group. Look out, as well as in. Seeing yourself, and your happiness, linked to the wider community can be incredibly rewarding and creates connections with the people around you.

The messages identified are intended to have generic appeal, while offering concrete activity-based ideas on how to improve personal wellbeing. They aim to prompt people into thinking about those things in life which are important to their wellbeing and perhaps should be prioritised in their day-to-day routines. It is almost certainly the case that people will, to some extent, already be involved in specific activities under the overarching themes of connecting, being active, learning, taking notice and giving.

Taken from the report presented to the Foresight Project on communicating the evidence base for improving people’s wellbeing. Written by: Jody Aked, Nic Marks, Corrina Cordon, Sam Thompson from the Centre for wellbeing, nef (the new economics foundation).

www.dpt.nhs.uk/FiveWays

Ref No: 568/03/19
2. keep Learning...

Try something new
Rediscover an old interest
Sign up for that course
Take on a different responsibility at work
Fix a bike
Learn to play an instrument or how to cook your favourite food
Set a challenge you will enjoy achieving

Learning new things will make you more confident as well as being fun

This Devon Partnership NHS Trust initiative is part of the national Foresight campaign to promote mental health and personal wellbeing. Visit www.dpt.nhs.uk/FiveWays
Five ways to wellbeing

A review of the most up-to-date evidence suggests that building the following five actions into our day-to-day lives is important for wellbeing:

1. Connect...
With the people around you. With family, friends, colleagues and neighbours. At home, work, school or in your local community. Think of these as the cornerstones of your life and invest time in developing them. Building these connections will support and enrich you every day.

2. keep Learning...
Try something new. Rediscover an old interest. Sign up for that course. Take on a different responsibility at work. Fix a bike. Learn to play an instrument or how to cook your favourite food. Set a challenge you will enjoy achieving. Learning new things will make you more confident as well as being fun.

3. be Active...
Go for a walk or run. Step outside. Cycle. Play a game. Garden. Dance. Exercising makes you feel good. Most importantly, discover a physical activity you enjoy and that suits your level of mobility and fitness.

4. take Notice...
Be curious. Catch sight of the beautiful. Remark on the unusual. Notice the changing seasons. Savour the moment, whether you are walking to work, eating lunch or talking to friends. Be aware of the world around you and what you are feeling. Reflecting on your experiences will help you appreciate what matters to you.

5. Give...
Do something nice for a friend, or a stranger. Thank someone. Smile. Volunteer your time. Join a community group. Look out, as well as in. Seeing yourself, and your happiness, linked to the wider community can be incredibly rewarding and creates connections with the people around you.

The messages identified are intended to have generic appeal, while offering concrete activity-based ideas on how to improve personal wellbeing. They aim to prompt people into thinking about those things in life which are important to their wellbeing and perhaps should be prioritised in their day-to-day routines. It is almost certainly the case that people will, to some extent, already be involved in specific activities under the overarching themes of connecting, being active, learning, taking notice and giving.

Taken from the report presented to the Foresight Project on communicating the evidence base for improving people’s wellbeing. Written by: Jody Aked, Nic Marks, Corrina Cordon, Sam Thompson from the Centre for wellbeing, nef (the new economics foundation).

Ref No: 569/03/19

www.dpt.nhs.uk/FiveWays
Five ways to wellbeing

3. be Active...

Go for a walk or run
Step outside
Cycle
Play a game
Garden
Dance

Exercising makes you feel good. Most importantly, discover a physical activity you enjoy and that suits your level of mobility and fitness.

Visit www.dpt.nhs.uk/FiveWays

This Devon Partnership NHS Trust initiative is part of the national Foresight campaign to promote mental health and personal wellbeing.
Five ways to wellbeing

A review of the most up-to-date evidence suggests that building the following five actions into our day-to-day lives is important for wellbeing:

1. Connect...
With the people around you. With family, friends, colleagues and neighbours. At home, work, school or in your local community. Think of these as the cornerstones of your life and invest time in developing them. Building these connections will support and enrich you every day.

2. keep Learning...
Try something new. Rediscover an old interest. Sign up for that course. Take on a different responsibility at work. Fix a bike. Learn to play an instrument or how to cook your favourite food. Set a challenge you will enjoy achieving. Learning new things will make you more confident as well as being fun.

3. be Active...
Go for a walk or run. Step outside. Cycle. Play a game. Garden. Dance. Exercising makes you feel good. Most importantly, discover a physical activity you enjoy and that suits your level of mobility and fitness.

4. take Notice...
Be curious. Catch sight of the beautiful. Remark on the unusual. Notice the changing seasons. Savour the moment, whether you are walking to work, eating lunch or talking to friends. Be aware of the world around you and what you are feeling. Reflecting on your experiences will help you appreciate what matters to you.

5. Give...
Do something nice for a friend, or a stranger. Thank someone. Smile. Volunteer your time. Join a community group. Look out, as well as in. Seeing yourself, and your happiness, linked to the wider community can be incredibly rewarding and creates connections with the people around you.

The messages identified are intended to have generic appeal, while offering concrete activity-based ideas on how to improve personal wellbeing. They aim to prompt people into thinking about those things in life which are important to their wellbeing and perhaps should be prioritised in their day-to-day routines. It is almost certainly the case that people will, to some extent, already be involved in specific activities under the overarching themes of connecting, being active, learning, taking notice and giving.

Taken from the report presented to the Foresight Project on communicating the evidence base for improving people’s wellbeing. Written by: Jody Aked, Nic Marks, Corrina Cordon, Sam Thompson from the Centre for wellbeing, nef (the new economics foundation).

Ref No: 570/03/19

www.dpt.nhs.uk/FiveWays
Five ways to wellbeing

4. take Notice...

Be curious
Catch sight of the beautiful
Remark on the unusual
Notice the changing seasons
Savour the moment, whether you are walking to work, eating lunch or talking to friends
Be aware of the world around you and what you are feeling

Reflecting on your experiences will help you appreciate what matters to you

This Devon Partnership NHS Trust initiative is part of the national Foresight campaign to promote mental health and personal wellbeing. Visit www.dpt.nhs.uk/FiveWays
Five ways to wellbeing

A review of the most up-to-date evidence suggests that building the following five actions into our day-to-day lives is important for wellbeing:

1. Connect...
With the people around you. With family, friends, colleagues and neighbours. At home, work, school or in your local community. Think of these as the cornerstones of your life and invest time in developing them. Building these connections will support and enrich you every day.

2. keep Learning...
Try something new. Rediscover an old interest. Sign up for that course. Take on a different responsibility at work. Fix a bike. Learn to play an instrument or how to cook your favourite food. Set a challenge you will enjoy achieving. Learning new things will make you more confident as well as being fun.

3. be Active...
Go for a walk or run. Step outside. Cycle. Play a game. Garden. Dance. Exercising makes you feel good. Most importantly, discover a physical activity you enjoy and that suits your level of mobility and fitness.

4. take Notice...
Be curious. Catch sight of the beautiful. Remark on the unusual. Notice the changing seasons. Savour the moment, whether you are walking to work, eating lunch or talking to friends. Be aware of the world around you and what you are feeling. Reflecting on your experiences will help you appreciate what matters to you.

5. Give...
Do something nice for a friend, or a stranger. Thank someone. Smile. Volunteer your time. Join a community group. Look out, as well as in. Seeing yourself, and your happiness, linked to the wider community can be incredibly rewarding and creates connections with the people around you.

The messages identified are intended to have generic appeal, while offering concrete activity-based ideas on how to improve personal wellbeing. They aim to prompt people into thinking about those things in life which are important to their wellbeing and perhaps should be prioritised in their day-to-day routines. It is almost certainly the case that people will, to some extent, already be involved in specific activities under the overarching themes of connecting, being active, learning, taking notice and giving.

Taken from the report presented to the Foresight Project on communicating the evidence base for improving people’s wellbeing. Written by: Jody Aked, Nic Marks, Corrina Cordon, Sam Thompson from the Centre for wellbeing, nef (the new economics foundation).
5. Give...
Do something nice for a friend, or a stranger
Thank someone
Smile
Volunteer your time
Join a community group
Look out, as well as in

Seeing yourself, and your happiness, linked to the wider community can be incredibly rewarding and creates connections with the people around you.
Five ways to wellbeing

A review of the most up-to-date evidence suggests that building the following five actions into our day-to-day lives is important for wellbeing:

1. Connect...
With the people around you. With family, friends, colleagues and neighbours. At home, work, school or in your local community. Think of these as the cornerstones of your life and invest time in developing them. Building these connections will support and enrich you every day.

2. keep Learning...
Try something new. Rediscover an old interest. Sign up for that course. Take on a different responsibility at work. Fix a bike. Learn to play an instrument or how to cook your favourite food. Set a challenge you will enjoy achieving. Learning new things will make you more confident as well as being fun.

3. be Active...
Go for a walk or run. Step outside. Cycle. Play a game. Garden. Dance. Exercising makes you feel good. Most importantly, discover a physical activity you enjoy and that suits your level of mobility and fitness.

4. take Notice...
Be curious. Catch sight of the beautiful. Remark on the unusual. Notice the changing seasons. Savour the moment, whether you are walking to work, eating lunch or talking to friends. Be aware of the world around you and what you are feeling. Reflecting on your experiences will help you appreciate what matters to you.

5. Give...
Do something nice for a friend, or a stranger. Thank someone. Smile. Volunteer your time. Join a community group. Look out, as well as in. Seeing yourself, and your happiness, linked to the wider community can be incredibly rewarding and creates connections with the people around you.

The messages identified are intended to have generic appeal, while offering concrete activity-based ideas on how to improve personal wellbeing. They aim to prompt people into thinking about those things in life which are important to their wellbeing and perhaps should be prioritised in their day-to-day routines. It is almost certainly the case that people will, to some extent, already be involved in specific activities under the overarching themes of connecting, being active, learning, taking notice and giving.

Taken from the report presented to the Foresight Project on communicating the evidence base for improving people’s wellbeing. Written by: Jody Aked, Nic Marks, Corrina Cordon, Sam Thompson from the Centre for wellbeing, nef (the new economics foundation).

Ref No: 572/03/19